

Dude, Where's My Bike?

A Data-Driven Analysis of Reported Bicycle Theft in Berlin

Selina Reuter & Halyna Shabarovska

Data Analytics · Final Presentation
20 August 2026

BERLIN · BICYCLE THEFT

Behind Every Row Is a Reported Incident

Internetwache
Polizei Berlin

Ihre Auswahl: Diebstahls-Anzeigen

» Angaben zum Sachverhalt » Anzeigender » Geschädigter » Abschluss

Wann ist es passiert

Datum von *

28.03.2026

Uhrzeit von *

15:00

Datum bis

28.03.2026

Uhrzeit bis

16:00

PRESENTATION RECONSTRUCTION — NOT AN OFFICIAL SUBMISSION

Wo ist es passiert bzw. wo haben Sie es festgestellt

Straße

NICHT IN OFFENEN DATEN

Hausnummer

NICHT IN OFFENEN DATEN

Postleitzahl

NICHT IN OFFENEN DATEN

Ort

Berlin

Nähere Ortsbeschreibung

Charlottenburg-Wilmersdorf

Örtlichkeit

Land

Deutschland

ANONYMISED DATASET RECORD

Bicycle type: Men's bicycle

Reported damage: €900

Completed theft: Yes

Record created: 13.04.2026

From Police Reports to a Bigger Picture

26,965

police-recorded bicycle-theft reports

1 January 2025 - 8 August 2026

12 districts

534 planning areas

WHERE are reports concentrated?

WHEN are bicycles reported stolen?

WHICH BICYCLE TYPES are reported most often?

HOW MUCH financial damage is reported?

Source: Berlin Police Open Data / Tools: Python · SQL · Tableau

Population Context Changes the District Ranking

Total police-recorded reports

Reports per 10,000 residents

Switch to Tableau Dashboards (Maps → Temporal → Financial)

Why These Findings Matter

FOR CYCLISTS

The analysis makes the scale, timing and financial impact of reported bicycle theft more visible.

FOR THE CITY

The patterns can support further investigation into prevention, secure parking and public awareness.

FOR US

We learned that one personal experience can reveal a wider problem—and that raw totals can be misleading without context.

One stolen bicycle is personal. Thousands of reports make the wider problem visible.